

The cheekiest political move of the century was when the bomb-throwing, idle, vagabondish and liquor-swilling Anarchists of Chicago placed a ticket in the field in the municipal elections of Chicago, and made the red flag of Socialism the emblem of their campaign. The ticket was buried under a Waterloo majority of 30,000, and the law and order element, composed alike of Republicans and Democrats, vied in working to see how complete a defeat could be administered.

This result purified the atmosphere of Chicago, as for some months it had been under a cloud, and regarded as the nest of the foulest gang of murderers and thieves that the spewing out of European Penitentiaries ever gave us.

There are now in the Cook Co. jail seven uncharged Anarchists, and a good way to celebrate the victory of law and decency would be to hang these men, who have been convicted by a jury of men ten thousand times their peers.

Dynamite ought never to be permitted as an element of American politics, and the way to make Socialism odious in America is to hang the cowardly assassins, who to wreck spite on capital do not hesitate to jeopardize to lives of women and children.

These men have no cause in common with the men who all over the United States today are inaugurating bona fide labor movements to better the condition of the class that sweats that it may live, and every labor organization in the country should promptly telegraph its congratulations to the men who led the victory of law and order in Chicago.

OVER-CROWDED CITIES.

The APPEAL has just received a copy of Henry George's Standard, published in New York city. It contains a startling exhibit of the over-crowded condition of New York City. In the 10th, 11th, 12th, and 13th wards of New York there is a population of 352 souls to the acre. Thirty one blocks contain over 72,000 souls.

In one square mile half a million people exist. In the tenement houses, which are hot beds of vice, drunkenness and crime, young children breathe this foetid atmosphere of evil, in their very cradles, and they tumble about in squalor, dirt and wretchedness, until in their teens, they are ready only for a life of crime. These children never know what it is to see a green field, and to hear the music of a mountain brook.

They are only use to beatings, over-work, sickness, hard beds and foul smelling rooms. If ever there was a field for the reformer it is here in the squalid neighborhoods of Mulberry Bend and Mott Street, New York, and only those who know Henry George personally, can realize with what ardor he throws his good heart and fine brain into the work.

SHORT-SIGHTED LEGISLATION.

The Hurd-house bill passed by the last Legislature, as the Gazette predicted at the time of its introduction, is not going to accomplish its desired end. The bill imposes, in addition to the usual license, an additional license of $500 a quarter on all such houses in the State. It was believed by those who interested themselves in its passage, that it would result in wiping out of existence all of the houses. Not so, however; it will merely concentrate such business to a few houses that will drive a lively trade. We see by the Sentinel that Mrs. Manager, proprietor of the Stone saloon, Kureka, paid the required $500 on Saturday last. Since embarking in the business she has made considerable money, and now that the law has throttled her small competitors she will rake in more twenties than ever. Some legislators can see about as far as the end of their noses.—Gazette.

—The Department officials are much exercised at the premature publication of the extradition treaty with Russia, and will endeavor to ascertain if there can be any possibility of a leak in the State Department, and endeavor to locate it.

[The above is extracted from our regular Washington letter. The letter would fill two columns of the APPEAL, but the above is all there was in the letter of any public interest. Our correspondent must be drunk.—ED. APPEAL.]
